Inclusion in Education for Persons with Disabilities | INEDIS

A partnership between Ethiopia and Austria

The objective of INEDIS is to strengthen capacity building to facilitate inclusive education for students with disabilities at university level and the ability of higher education institutions (HEIs) to contribute to inclusive community and school development with a special focus on the intersection of gender and disability. INEDIS addresses those topics by:

- Strengthening the capacities of HEIs and employing institutions by empowering students with disabilities at universities and by further developing research and teaching capacities on the topic of disability and inclusion. Addis Ababa University leads the development of an evidence-based training for HEI staff that will enable universities to better support students with disabilities in higher education.
- Fostering research and teaching with respect to gender and disability and developing direct measures to empower female students with disabilities in education and the labor market.
- Enhancing research and teaching skills with respect to inclusive community and school development and strengthening university community services to support inclusive development.

A special emphasis is given to foster research, teaching and management skills and exchange of research findings and knowledge within the consortium. Three universities in Ethiopia are partnering with the University of Vienna who supports and advises project activities and the management of the project, namely Addis Ababa University, Gondar University and Dilla University. Particular activities are foreseen for each Ethiopian university.

The project is funded by APPEAR, a programme of the Austrian Development Cooperation.
